Responsive Reading – Private Annotations

Both instructors and students will be able to write private comments for their own use on a PDF file

Responsive Reading – Assignments

Instructors will be able to create assignments for students and grade them, based on students' annotations

The screenshot shows a web browser displaying a PLOS Biology article. The article title is "All biology is computational biology" by Florian Markowitz. The abstract discusses the central role of computational thinking in biology. On the right side, a sidebar displays an annotation: "life that today" - means modern life. The annotation is dated 21/08/20 14:58. The browser interface includes a toolbar at the top with navigation and search icons, and a search bar in the sidebar.

RESEARCH MATTERS

All biology is computational biology

Abstract

Here, I argue that computational thinking and techniques are so central to the quest of understanding life that today all biology is computational biology. Computational biology brings order into our understanding of life, it makes biological concepts rigorous and testable, and it provides a reference map that holds together individual insights. The next modern synthesis in biology will be driven by mathematical, statistical, and computational methods being absorbed into mainstream biological training, turning biology into a quantitative science.

Week 1: Socialization

Socialization refers to the lifelong process of inheriting and disseminating norms, customs, values and ideologies, providing an individual with the skills and habits necessary for participating within their own society. The readings for this week set the background for our discussion in class.
